JAPAN'S CONSENT TO PHOTOGRAPHERS WAS NOT GAINED OUT ON STRIKE

MYSTERY AS TO IMMIGRATION AMENDMENT IS DISCLOSED BY STATEMENT—VISCONTI HAYASHI DECLARED THAT HE HAD CHANGED TENTATIVE POLICY—THREATS TO JAPAN'S INTERESTS

WASHINGTON, June 21—There has always been a good deal of mystery about the Japanese immigration amendment. At the time of its adoption it was believed generally by members of congress and others that it was passed with the knowledge and approval of the Japanese Government. The impression was conveyed that the Japanese Government welcomed the amendment as a graceful way of settling its face and settling the school controversy. It was also printed generally that prior to the adoption of the amendment it had been submitted to the Japanese Government, which had fully approved of its terms. The truth is that not only did the Japanese Government not sanction the amendment, but Japan was not consulted by the president, according to the official statement of the foreign minister. After the passage of the immigration bill Visconti Hayashi, the minister of foreign affairs, replying to an interpretation by Mr. McChesnut in the house of representatives, said that at the end of January he had explained that, in view of the friendly sentiments of the president and the bulk of the American nation toward Japan, an amicable settlement of the school question seemed imminent.

"At that time," Visconti Hayashi continued, "the case was waiting the decision of the judiciary, but subsequently the president changed his method and fell back upon the rights secured to the United States by the treaty, which change of program had not been made a subject of consultation with Japan."

This was not an agreeable alternative from Japan's point of view, but the president's analysis of the situation was understood to be that all questions at issue in California—the school question, the boycotting of Japanese restaurants and the assaults upon Japanese subjects—were merely secondary troubles which would cease as soon as the prime cause, labor immigration, was remedied.

As to that, however, the president

EARTHQUAKE AT TONGA ON JUNE 11

NAVAL HEROES FLEET
VICE-ADMIRAL HUGHES AND HIS SQUADRON
TONGA, June 11—A powerful earthquake, estimated to be of magnitude 7.5, struck the island of Tonga at 11:00 a.m. on June 11, causing widespread damage and loss of life. The earthquake was felt throughout the island and in the surrounding waters. The fleet of Vice-Admiral Hughes, consisting of the battleship USS Oregon, the cruiser USS Albatross, and the destroyer USS Lamson, was in the harbor at the time of the earthquake. The ships sustained no damage and all hands were saved.

TRIAL SET FOR JULY 1 MATERIAL FOR BREAKWATER

VICE-ADMIRAL HUGHES AND HIS SQUADRON
TONGA, June 11—The trial of the case against the Japanese government for the destruction of the breakwater at the port of Papeete, French Polynesia, is set for July 1. The case was brought by the French government against the Japanese government for the destruction of the breakwater by the Japanese fleet in 1914. The trial is being held in the court of the League of Nations at Geneva. The Japanese government has denied the charges and has offered to pay compensation for the damage done to the breakwater.

FEWER ISLAND JAPS TRADE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15—Immigration Commissioner Hart North reports that the immigration regulations passed at the last session of Congress have had a marked effect on the number of Japanese laborers coming to this port. Since the law went into effect, only 118 Japanese of the coolie class have come here from Japan, 94 being males and 24 females. The Coptic brought only 17 on her last trip, and on the last voyage of the Sierra from Honolulu only 2 came. Many have been turned back on account of having bogus passports. Recently over 200 Japanese have come here from Honolulu on their way to British Columbia, to which country they went by steamer from here.

In the trade with Japan, the principal articles imported from the United States are sugar, flour, and other foodstuffs. The principal articles exported to the United States are sugar, coffee, and other foodstuffs. The trade between the United States and Japan is increasing steadily.
